1.Go to the web page http://www.deanza.edu/counseling/career/jobs.html#.
2. Find that under "Newspaper Classifieds Online" introduction there is a "Back to top" link, but others shown as "[Back to top]".
3.Notice that not each introduction has "Back to top" link.

EXPECTED BEHAVIOR: The links with same function on the same page are supposed to be in the same form. Each introduction should be same with "Back to top" link.

ACTUAL BEHAVIOR: There are two different types: "Back to top" and "[Back to top]". The link exists under some introductions while others no.

Hsinjung Chan   2016-04-11 22:54:13 PDT   Comment 1

I can see your point of indicating the different forms of "Back to top" on this page. Since the actual form of the first "Back to top" you mentioned is underlined, maybe you can add this feature in your description instead of just putting the words in quotation marks. And I agree with you that the page does not have a consistency of using "Back to top" hyperlinks, but I wonder if it should be filed as a separate bug.

Mary Ann May-Pumphrey   2016-04-12 17:52:48 PDT   Comment 2

Good feedback, Hsinjung! This is indeed two bugs posing as one! However, since we don't have an owner for /counseling, it's not necessary to rewrite it as two separate ones UNLESS Jia thinks she may want to hand in this bug for her eventual Bugzilla assignment.

Good catch and well-written but not in an owned area. Nor is the web page owner displayed on the page!)-:

Good write-up, Jia!

Hi Jia,

ResumeSmarts is actually an application that works like a SaaS application.
Everything that occurs is within a single webpage shell and if you press on the back button you are actually leaving the application. With that said, we do have functionality that will inform the user when they are pressing the back button and what will happen if they continue with the action based on some other functionality within the application that is currently disabled.

We will enable the functionality and give you an update next weekend so you can test the functionality again.

Thank you,
marie

Hi Jia,

We have provided a fix for this issue. Can you please test again and confirm whether the fix has resolved the issue you reported?

Thank you,
marie

Hi Jia,

The Gray area is a placeholder for Advertisements which will appear when we have more users but we do agree something should be there :)

Thank you for this issue :)

Oversight discovered in server side script, fixed. The "Return to search form" links on the search results page now work.

Note: the bug was not limited to using "Winter 2016" as the quarter. It was also repeatable for "Spring 2016" and now "Summer 2016".

TO REPRODUCE:

1. Open web browser and enter http://www.deanza.edu in the URL box.
2. Click on "A-Z index" hyperlink on the top of the page.
2. Click on the hyperlink "Outreach & Relations with Schools".
3. Go back to the "A-Z Website Directory".
4. Click on the hyperlink "Parents (Information for parents of De Anza Students)".

Expected Result:
The two hyperlinks "Outreach & Relations with Schools" and "Parents (Information for parents of De Anza Students)" should link to different webpages.

ACTUAL BEHAVIOR:
The two hyperlinks link to the same webpage.

Mary Ann May-Pumphrey   2016-05-25 12:43:17 PDT   Comment 1

Jia: I'm not convinced this is a bug. It could easily be one, the result of a copy/paste that didn't get the follow-up editing. But it could be that somebody wanted two different textual messages that would lead to the same page.

What I suggest you do is to use the search capability to find a page that you think more closely represents what the target of one of the two links should be. Then, you'll have a much better case that this is indeed a bug. Plus, you'll have saved the web team some time and effort in figuring out how to fix the bug.
